

Please tell us any post-18 higher education you have completed, including dates:* (200 words)

For example: BA or MA. If you have not done any post-18 education, please put 'none'.

I received a BSc in Quantitative Biology and Business Strategy from McGill University, Montreal, 2020-2024. During this time, I gained experience working in a computational biodiversity lab and two tech startups.

In June 2026, after completing Year One, I withdrew from the MA Art and Science Program at Central Saint Martins. In essence, I couldn't justify the fees against what the course offered: three group crits and five personal tutorials across the first year, cramped studios closing by 9pm on weekdays and all day Sunday, and the prioritization of unstructured individual time over sustained critical dialogue.

Alongside the MA, from January to June 2026, I completed a six-month hybrid programme with the Institute for Postnatural Studies that combined theoretical modules from faculty and guest lecturers including Jussi Parikka, and collaborative discussion, knowledge exchange, and experimentation culminating in a show at La Casa Encendida, Madrid. Over the same period I built a practice of regular studio visits and peer critique with artists working in London.

*This past month, I've successfully applied for the Youth Mobility Visa from Canada and will return to London at the end of August.

Please tell us about your artistic work and your interest in the Conditions Studio Programme (What? and Why?) in 400 words or less.*

What are you interested in doing as an artist? What would you like to do at Conditions?

My practice moves across painting, drawing, and writing to explore the legibility and erotics of form, gesture, and body. I'm interested in subverting the viewer's position and frame of reference by placing them somewhere they cannot occupy, spatially and materially; an erotics of withholding. Figures themselves exist in ambiguous material states: built of stone or air, muddied and shimmering, in tension, yearning, dissolving. By building structures such as wooden plinths and steel frames to create architectural framings, I hope to capture an essence of ephemerality of the body's form and gestures. Sometimes, the image is rarefied through the distortion of dimension, scale, and magnification. For instance, In the panoramic view of Misty in Per(re)verse, a single figure continues across the window while interior and exterior are inverted; each section of the picture is coherent and yet incompatible as a whole.

My goal is to interrupt instinctual reactions to form and to inhabit a space between thinking and knowing that is poetic, critical, and often erotic. I'm greatly inspired by an artist's ability to apply their research to thicken and complicate relationships between language, image, object, and material, and from this construct their own diagrams and cosmologies via visual and expanded media, as in the work of Sin Wai Kin and spaces like Plicnik. I'm currently curious about the language of framing spatially but also through time, frequency, and sequencing. As a classical pianist, a current interest of mine is early 1900s post-tonal, twilight-era compositions that are harmonically chromatic, and structurally freeflowing yet restrained and sometimes shy. In the next stage of my practice, I'd like to explore these ideas through moving image and sound.

As a self-trained artist, I've built the parameters of my practice largely on my own terms, through intuitive making, autotheory and lived experience, and retroactive reading. I'm drawn to Conditions because of the sustained critique, intellectual exchange, and mutual support and how it extends beyond the structured program into the life of the cohort. I'm excited about collaborating with the cohort as a way of encountering new forms of artistic inquiry and making and I am excited about the prospect of developing work over the next year in a critically engaged space that can expose me to other methods, disciplines, and perspectives on art practice. At Conditions, I hope to challenge my practice to create a new body of work (paintings, framings, (sculpture?) and experimentations in media) that respond to the dialogue of the program as well as the opportunity for public-facing engagement.